ARIZONA ITEMS.

A correspondent from Haywood's ranch, Little Colorado, writes the Miner as follows: It has been raining heavily for several days past, and the country generally is flooded with water. The mail road is washed away so badly that there are perpendicular pitches of five and six feet.

The mail carrier who has just come from Navajo Springs says he had to camp two days and one night on the high lands, by the side of a stream that in ordinary times is scarcely greater than a rill.

Sergeant Bothwell, from toward Camp Apache, has been kept here unable to proceed on account of high water. Jeff Lynn undertook to take a mail bag east, got into a creek and narrowly escaped losing his life.

With great difficulty he succeeded in getting out with his team and the mail. The drivers of the buckboards have all displayed great courage and endurance much. The flood is nearly as great as that of 1861.

We take the following from the Sentinel: Ex-Governor Safford has arrived in Yuma from Washington. While here he declared very positively that he should not under any circumstances come before the people as a candidate for office; that his private affairs now demand his attention to such an extent as to forbid his taking any further interest in politics than is the duty of every citizen. He was very positive that the Southern Pacific company would begin pushing their railroad from
